

Training Accreditation Overview

AIUK has been supporting training, teaching and auditing bodies to achieve accreditation since 2007 with its vast wealth of experience and expertise in this specialised sector.

In line with our impartiality obligations and professional codes of conduct we do not recommend or deliver accreditation training programmes or certification services. We simply deliver cost effective and plain-talking International Accreditation for training & teaching bodies and their qualifying courses.

We ensure that the common sense criteria we assess courses and training bodies to ensure that the training and services delivered are always fitting for the respective client requirements. Our dedicated team of experts apply their many years of practice and expertise, along with the relevant standard principles to ensure that all training materials align with the recorded training objectives.

The AIUK accreditation team ensures that all teaching & training providers address the obligatory additional functions and activities which include any academic and administrative support and the required Health & Safety requirements within the training environment. This can be and is usually different for the many diverse types of training and unique training environments. These can include spaces such as schools, offices, hospitals, prisons, out-side in nature, factories, hotel function rooms and gymnasiums.

As a prerequisite of the course accreditation process, course management plans are submitted that define the fundamentals of any course. In line with criteria, AIUK will assess and substantiated this at different intervals and at random throughout an organisations registration. AIUK retain a record of all training materials and courses.

The accreditation of training or teaching bodies training programmes provides a vital layer of assurance to clients and participants. This further establishes another level of professionalism, integrity and transparency when dealing with organisations such as local authorities, Insurance companies, business associations, care sector, criminal justice system and educational organisations to name a few. Third Party Accreditation by AIUK and other bodies will often tip the balance when a client is making their final choice of training provider and is often the vital piece to winning that all important contract.
